2) The Numbers (work off ARV, never list)

ARV (after full reno)	~$210,000 (conservative)
ARV basis	Redfin AVM ~$193,254; 70129 renovated 4-bed listings $210k–$280k; ZIP median SOLD
Repairs (studs-out gut)	~$105,000 (~$50/sqft on 2,106 sqft — all systems + finishes)
Builder max (0.70×ARV – repairs)	~$42,000 ← what an end builder pays
MY MAO ceiling (builder max – fee)	~$32,000 ← the MOST we ever pay the seller
MY opening offer	$28,000 (low-anchored: full gut, flood-zone risk, seller priced well above MAO)
My assignment fee	~$14k at $28k open · ~$10k at $32k ceiling

3) Dispo Fit & Verdict

Channel: MaxDispo (builders). Guttled/studs-out is exactly their product. At a $28k contract, builder all-in = $28k + $105k repairs = ~$133k = ~63% of ARV (~37% builder margin) — clears their ≤70%-of-ARV / ≤60%-contract test. It ONLY pencils contracted in the high-$20s to low-$30s.

VERDICT: Work it, but disciplined. Open $28,000; absolute ceiling $32,000. Seller is at $80k list and already declined $44k, so today this is a PASS unless the seller will come down into the low-$30s. The VA's job is to find the motivation and pull the price down — or move on. Do NOT chase it above $32k.

5) VA Deal Script — how to work it

Goal: re-open with agent Jason Gale, gauge seller motivation, and anchor low. Keep it human and casual. Never promise a walkthrough/tour — we buy sight-unseen off photos + disclosures and verify in the 10-day inspection window. Never go above $32k.

A) Opening text / voicemail to the agent:

"Hey Jason, it's [VA name] with Paragon Government Solutions — we're the cash buyer that looked at 5001 Beaucaire. I know our last number didn't land. It's a full studs-out job so our cash works in the high-20s, but I'd love to know where the seller really is. Any flexibility on price for a clean, fast cash close, no contingencies? Where can I send written terms?"

B) If the agent engages — qualifying questions:

- How long has it been sitting? Any other offers?
- Why'd the seller gut it and stop — out of funds, lost interest?
- Is the seller an investor or an individual? How motivated / any deadline?
- What's the lowest they'd realistically take for a guaranteed cash close?

C) Presenting the offer (after they give an email):

"Appreciate it. Here's where we land: $28,000 cash, as-is, $1,000 earnest to title in 3 days, 10-day inspection, and we close in about 3 weeks or on the seller's timeline — no financing or appraisal contingency, no commission to chase. It's a gut job and we take all that risk, so the number reflects it. If the seller wants certainty and a fast clean close, we're ready to sign. Send it over and I'll get you written terms same day."

D) Objection handling:

- "That's way too low." — "I hear you. It's gutted to the studs — all systems, all finishes, plus flood-zone risk out east. After we put ~$100k+ into it, our cash number has to leave room. If they're closer to the low-30s I can take another look, but that's the ceiling for us."
- "Can you come see it first?" — "We don't do in-person walkthroughs — we buy sight-unseen off photos and the disclosures, then confirm during a 10-day inspection. Just send current interior photos."
- "Seller wants list ($80k)." — "Then we're not your buyer today, and that's ok. Keep my number — if it doesn't sell and they get flexible, I can close cash fast. No hard feelings."

E) Hard stops (do NOT break):

- Never offer above $32,000. If they counter higher, it's a pass — escalate to Charles, don't negotiate up.
- Never promise to walk/tour the property or send someone through it.
- Get a written email before sending any formal terms; don't quote new numbers blind.
- Log every reply and loop Charles before sending a signed offer.

6) Listing Photos

Photos couldn't be auto-pulled (Zillow/Redfin block automated downloads). Save the interior/exterior photos from the listing and drop them into the frames below, or send them to Charles to embed. Prioritize: street view, the gutted interior (studs/framing), kitchen/bath rough-ins, roof, and any water/flood damage.
